Navy chief selects lend a helping hand at Camp Apasus

About 20 Navy chief selects volunteered their time this week to help with several projects at one of Girl Scouts of the Colonial Coast's properties, Camp Apasus. The camp, which is located in Norfolk, Va., borders Mason Creek and provides campers and other guests an outdoor retreat from the busy city.

The team of dedicated volunteers built 10 picnic tables, painted the new cabin on the property, and helped to dig holes and remove old fence posts. Thanks to their hard work, future campers and visitors will get to enjoy the updates to the site!

"Volunteering is a good way for the military to give back to the community," LSC Luzunaris said. "Our work helps the kids and it feels good to give back to the kids in Hampton Roads."
