Introduction to The Co-op Troop Model

What is a Co-op Troop?

In a co-op troop, all adults who can do so will take on a leadership role within the troop. Typically, adults rotate meeting leadership and other roles are divided according to interests and talents. Specifics can be determined according to troop needs, and individual adults can take on multiple roles.

The Benefits

Many hands make light work! A co-op troop means that everyone is contributing and nobody has too much to do. More adult involvement = more resources, more ideas, and more support for youth! Involved adults are better able to understand, see, and reinforce the impact that Girl Scouts has on their child.

Keeping it Youth-Led

Girl Scout and adult pairs can work on planning and delivering meeting content together. Girl Scouts can partner with their adults and assist with specific roles.

Each role has a specific impact on troop members and keeping it youth-led should always be at the forefront of troop decisions and plans.

Working Together to Plan the Year

1. Troop Coordinator schedules a parent meeting. Troop adults determine the general meeting schedule, complete paperwork, and decide volunteer roles.
2. During the first troop meeting, the Program Coordinator gathers input from the Girl Scouts and helps them to make decisions about their priorities for the year.
3. Communications Coordinator adds meetings and other activities to the calendar and sets up sign-ups for meeting leaders and trip chaperones as needed.
4. Troop Coordinator makes reservations for meeting space and completes any necessary paperwork and/or insurance needs per GSCCC guidelines.
5. All adult volunteers sign up to lead meetings and chaperone trips according to their specific role and/or personal interest. The Trip Coordinator makes all necessary reservations and completes paperwork as needed.
6. Throughout the year, Troop Coordinator ensures that adult:youth ratios are met and that adults have completed all relevant training for their roles.
